Forensic accounting in commercial legal disputes: Five quick and practical tips

Director of Forensic Accounting at Cutcher & Neale, Nick Gaudion will present several tips for lawyers from the perspective of a forensic accountant. Topics covered will include accessing records, valuations for shareholder agreements, the importance of appropriate and clear instructions, managing conflicting assumptions when you have a single expert and steps to take when experts present different opinions.

Meet the speaker

Nick Gaudion, Director, Forensic Accounting, Cutcher & Neale

Nick Gaudion joined Cutcher & Neale in 2006. He is committed to helping the legal profession make sense of the dollars in dispute resolution and is highly regarded by our clients. Whilst he started his career at Deloitte as an auditor, since specialising in forensic accounting Nick has developed a reputation delivering independent opinions to complex issues in an easy to understand manner, whether that be in a written report or in the witness box. Highly regarded in his field, Nick has written technical papers and presented at numerous legal seminars and forums. In April 2013 Nick was appointed to the Administrative Appeals Tribunal as a part-time member with accounting experience.
